Bins & Clear Container Recommendations

You cannot go wrong with bins and clear containers for keeping things neat inside closets, cabinets and other storage areas. You pull a bin out, have full access to all its contents and put it all back. Storing like items together makes things easy to retrieve and saves time and frustration. I love labels too, so label away, you greatly increase the likelihood that it will get put away where it BELONGS!!

These can be used in almost any room of the house, I have tried to group them in a logical order, but take a look throughout to find what best fits your needs.

I love these bins for kitchen, baths, office or craft spaces. It has compartments so you can store like things that are smaller and often get lost, together. In the kitchen think sauce and spice packets, any kinds or bars or small snack items, even smaller kitchen gadgets. In the bath, small products, items like floss, razor refills or disposable razors, toothbrush heads, travel products and more! Very versatile.

Narrower versions and other sizes that can be used for cabinets, drawers, laundry, crafts, office, closet, baths and more!

I also use them for the refrigerator and freezer. When you buy smaller items, yogurt, apples, things like that...they can get lost in the shuffle and pushed to the back of the space to die! Bins help you keep this where you can see them! These come large and small. They also contain messes and spills, making it easier to keep the refrigerator tidy.

I love these lazy susans for the spice cabinet AND the refer. These bottles hold oils, balsamic and more in the spice cabinet and keep them from tipping. Same in the refer, they take up less space and still allow you to see the contents. There's also an undecided one for all sorts of items.

If you have a lazy susan cabinet, these can make it much easier to store smaller items.

Tea drinkers will love this, you can see all your flavors at one time along with refills needed! No more half empty boxes taking up all the cabinet space.

Magic for your drawers! These tension dividers help keeping the Tupperware drawer or other drawer spaces neat and tidy! Can also be used for clothing drawers.

This option is open at the top and works well for baths, offices and small kitchen items

These are great for crafts (markers, paint brushes or pens/pencils) but are also read nice in the bath. Eye pencils, makeup brushes, small compacts, tubes, and more take up less space and these interlock for stacking!

These are similar to the ones above, but are tall and thin. I use them to store my “many” pairs of RX eyeglasses. It keeps them in one place, and clean!

Large enough to hold many pills, or get two colors, one for AM and one for PM Sturdy lids, these also make great jewelry organizers for travel, or hold small office supplies like paper clips and rubber bands.

Organizers like this are handy in drawers, medicine cabinets or on the countertop in the bath for small items you use daily.

Lipstick, gloss or balms stay tidy in this bin! Also great for essential oils!

I like these lidded bins for bath items that you don't use every day but want to keep neat and like items together. Easy to stack and access and see the contents.

Compacts and palettes take up a lot of space. This bin makes it easy to see and find the one you want.

Keep the basics neat and tidy on the bathroom countertop in this handy bin.

I don't have a lot of nail polish because I love my manicurist! However, this keeps them from leaking and tipping over. Can also be used for cosmetic tubes and sticks, or essential oils in larger bottles.
